THE Dhaka University authorities will take legal action against 60 former teachers – who were earlier sacked for not joining back after going abroad on education leave – if they do not pay back the money given to them in salaries while they were on leave.

The 60 teachers collectively owe the university Tk 4,38,66,947, according to a press release of the university.

The statement also said the authority asked the teachers to pay the money back on several occasions, but did not get any response. It also said the rate of interest would increase continuously until the teachers would pay the money back.

The authorities claimed the teachers received the salary in violation of service rules.

They also published advertisement in several national newspapers in this regard earlier.

Dhaka University disclosed the names of the former teachers.
