Students haven't confined themselves to only relief and fund collection for the victims of the floods though. Many of them have teamed up to visit flood affected sites in Feni, Noakhali, Cumilla, and other areas of the country to lend a hand with the rescue efforts.

In addition to food and medicine, these students are also collecting boats and lifejackets for distribution at the flood affected areas. Those visiting the affected sites in person are keeping their peers updated on social media through Facebook groups by sharing their real-time locations.

As of today, millions across the country have been displaced from their homes and some have even lost their lives due to the floods. The greater impact of this disaster is yet to be understood. However, the response from our country's youth during such difficult times has been imminent and commendable.
