Thana final exam for primary students likely

The Government is contemplating to introduce "thana final examination" system with a view to improving the standard of primary school education in the country, reports ENA.

According to an official source, the final examination

The successful candidates will be held for the students of Class V at the end of the academic year. The examination will be conducted by a "thana examination authority".

will be given certificates which will enable them to get admission into the high schools.

The source said that a survey would be carried out in the primary schools to study the feasibility of introducing the new system.

Meanwhile, some thana education officers conducted such examinations during the last academic session, the source added.
