The international examination board OxfordAQA has organised a teacher training programme on science subjects.

The two-day event, held at Hotel Sarina in Dhaka, brought together over 100 teachers from leading English medium schools across the country.

The training featured sessions on teaching strategies, assessment methods, and classroom activities for GCSE science subjects, conducted by OxfordAQA's international trainer and chief examiner, Kevin Lancaster, said a press release.

The programme was inaugurated by Shahin Reza, country director for Bangladesh and Nepal at OxfordAQA, and Kevin Lancaster, trainer and chief examiner at OxfordAQA.
