Islamic Studies made compulsory for SSC exams

The Government has decided to include Islamic Studies (Diniat) as a compulsory subject for the secondary school certificate examinations from 1991, an official announcement said here yesterday, reports BSS.

A press release of the National Education and Curriculum Board said this would be applicable to the students who would be in Class-IX from 1989 onwards.

It said because of the restructuring of the curriculum, the total 1000 marks of the examination would be divided as follows: 700 marks for five compulsory subjects; 200 marks in one paper of the first part of elective subjects and 100 marks in second part.
