

2nd national science week begins today

By Our Varsity Correspondent

The second national science week organised by 'Jatiya Bigyan O Prajuktibidya Parishad' (National Association for Science and Technology) will begin today (Friday) throughout the country.

Science fairs, exhibitions and discussion meetings will be held during the week.

The organisers of the Science Week are expressing the hope that the week will help popularise science among the people and in young boys and girls.

Besides the students of the schools and the science clubs will also participate.

The science fair will be held in the districts and sub-divisional towns. The final competition among the selected representatives from the subdivisions will be held in Dacca.

In Dacca science fair will be held in four centres. These are Jagannath College; Teachers' Training College; Titumir College and Khilgaon Government School.
