

Standard Of Education

Sir.—In spite of the fact that the Government is pouring large sums of money every year in the field of education with a view to improving the standard of education; yet what appears from the results of the University examination this year remind us once again of the state of affairs in the university and its affiliated colleges or, for that matter, in our educational institution as a whole.

The nation can hardly bear this loss if students in such big numbers fail to pass. It is high time that educational institutions are stirred into positive actions.

If we are to produce quality manpower educated and motivated to fulfil conscientiously the responsibilities of building up the nation we will have to wake up to the fact that we must have a strong educational base.

The qualitative standard of education among others largely depends on the quality of teachers and their professional dedication. The problems of teachers which are predominant financial are to a great extent responsible for the deterioration of qualitative aspect of our education.

In order to improve the situation the teaching profession has to be made attractive to the young talents. It must be made more lucrative compared to other professions.—Yours etc..
