

The education scenerio

— Campus Report —

The Senate polls of JU had to be cancelled in the wake of alleged rigging. It is gathered that a group of outsiders entered the campus too in connection with the election. It is very unfortunate because such activities by the teachers will only pave the way for students to follow their example.

their class. There is no chance that things will change here soon. The teachers are sticking to their class test and the students are demanding cancellation of these tests. In the absence of a students organisation a settlement has become very difficult. Pabna Edward College is closed too following clashes

JU, had always be a quiet peaceful alمامater. But the way things are going it will not be the same there too. It is gathered that teachers groupings in different departments is affecting departmental proceedings and creating problems for the students.

Students feel this Senate election of JU has set a bad precedence for them. They are particularly stunned by the activities of some teachers who had till the election been looked upon by the students with great respect. But during the last election they acted most unteacherlike.

Why should outsiders come at the campus and take charge of things? Why was the result declared in the first place and then cancelled are questions which need to be looked into?

RU and RMC are closed. BUET although officially open is very much close as the students are abstaining from between two rival groups. Some say that if DUCSU elections are held in January there might be trouble at DU too and it might also be forced to go on unscheduled closure. It is too early to predict but the possibility cannot be ruled out entirely.

The ongoing BA/BSC/B.com exams have been marred by physical assault and other untoward happenings. A magistrate had to bear the brunt just because he went to an exam hall to perform his duty. The exam are going on and it is too early to say what will happen till the end.

In the school however students and teachers are busy with the annual exams. The text exam is already over. Some schools have started giving out admission forms for the coming year. Guardians have already started knocking at the reputed schools of Dhaka.
