

Ministry clarifies SSC structured question system

UNB, Dhaka

The education ministry yesterday issued an amended notification over holding SSC examinations under the structured question system.

This structured question system would be considered as creative question system (CQS) and only the SSC examinations of Bangla first paper and religious studies would be held under the new system from 2010 and it would be introduced fully from 2011, said a PID handout.

The schools concerned have been asked to ensure the introduction of the system in class VIII on a limited scale from the current year. It will be introduced fully in class VI, VII, VIII and IX from the next year.

The system will be introduced in Madrasa equivalent to SSC and technical education system from 2011 and in HSC and equivalent Madrasa and technical education-related public examinations in 2012.

The National Curriculum and Textbook Board and the Dhaka Education Board will jointly prepare a question bank.

The latest announcement would take effect immediately, the handout said.
