

JU launches new instt named after Bangabandhu

JU Correspondent

JAHANGIRNAGAR University is going to launch Bangabandhu Institute of Comparative Literature and Culture.

A decision was made to take in a total of 25 students — 13 male and 12 female— for a bachelor degree course in forthcoming academic session, said deputy registrar Abu Hasan.

JU Bangla department associate professor Rezaul Islam was appointed the director of the new institution that is planning to offer bachelor's, master's, MPhil, and PhD degrees on comparative literature and culture.

The institute's admission process will be conducted under the 'I unit' of the university. Those seeking admission must have GPA score up to 3.00 at the SSC and HSC examinations, while the GPA score in Bangla and English must be up to the B-grade.

Moreover, a museum of culture will be founded under this institute as part of comparative research involving different literatures and cultures.

Besides, it will initiate the 'Bangabandhu ICLC' scholarship to encourage graduate and post-graduate level research projects on comparative literature and culture.
