Science clubs can play a unique role in creating environmental awareness among the young generation by coming forward against environmental pollution.

National Museum of Science and Technology director general Mohammad Munir Chowdhury said this to the newly elected executive committee of Rajshahi University Science Club on Monday.

He said that Rajshahi University Science Club could engage the young generation to make people aware of the dangers of lead pollution and assist government agencies in science-based waste management.

Rajshahi University Science Club received a telescope from the science museum, said a press release.
